Sam loved music. He was amazing with a guitar and played it very well. Every year, his school organized a talent show. Sam would dream about winning the talent show, but he never participated because he thought he would not win. He was afraid the other participants were much better than him. However, this year, his music teacher signed him up for the show. The fear of losing continued to pester Sam. His music teacher told him to put that fear into action and made him practice for long hours. Sam's hard work finally paid off and he not only performed very well but even won the talent show.
