

STORY TIME

Read the following story carefully.

One day, a hunter set up a net to catch birds and scattered some grains over it. After some time, a flock of pigeons came by, started pecking at these grains, and got caught in the trap. They all struggled and flapped their wings to escape but to no avail. After some time, they started losing hope, and that's when one of them had the idea to combine their strengths and try to fly upward together. The pigeons put in all their energy and carried the net away. The hunter ran after them, but they had already escaped.

What is the moral of this story?

A large dashed-line rectangular box for writing the answer.

